European Integration case for Central Asia (EICCA)

Jean Monnet Actions

FINAL REPORT

Period: November 2023-January 2026

The European Integration Course for Central Asia (EICCA) is the first Jean Monnet Module coordinated by a Tajik higher education institution. Implemented by the Institute of Economy and Trade of the Tajik State University of Commerce (IET TSUC), the project responds to the growing need for structured EU studies and enhanced academic cooperation between the European Union and Central Asia. The overall objective of EICCA is to introduce a comprehensive, academically rigorous, and sustainable course on European integration, co-developed and co-delivered by local faculty and European experts. The project aims to build institutional capacity in EU studies, enhance the competences of educators, create sustainable learning materials, and strengthen student engagement through innovative teaching formats and international academic interaction.

The project also seeks to raise awareness of EU values, institutions, and policies among young scholars, and to create a platform for dialogue on EU–Central Asia partnership dynamics. Through structured academic content, teacher training, public events, and an official EICCA web presence, the project contributes to long-term capacity building in European Studies in Tajikistan.

During the reporting period, the project delivered all core academic and capacity-building activities planned under the EICCA Module. Four full modules of the European Integration Course were designed, prepared, and taught using the course book and teaching materials developed jointly by Tajik and European partners. In the 2024–2025 academic year, 256 contact hours and 128 hours of individual student learning were completed across two groups. In the fall semester of 2025–2026, an additional 128 contact hours and 64 hours of individual learning were delivered, bringing the total to 384 contact hours and 192 hours of individualized work. Within the 384 teaching hours delivered to students, certain sessions were taught directly by the EU experts, contributing to internationalized teaching and enhancing course quality. This corresponds to the 384 teaching hours planned for student instruction in the project work plan. In addition to these hours, the project also foresees 5 hours for the Orientation Seminar (Task 2.1), 10 hours for the Seminar Series and Teaching Methodology Training (Tasks 2.2–2.3) led by EU experts, and 40 hours allocated to the EICCA Summer Camp (Task 3.1), all of which are included in the total 439 planned hours for the project’s academic, methodological, and training activities.

To support further sustainability, the full coursebook and materials were translated into Russian, enabling delivery of the EICCA course to a new group of students majoring in International Economics (World Economy) in the spring semester of 2025–2026. For this additional group, 48 contact hours and 24 hours of student individual learning will be carried out as part of the project’s dissemination and sustainability strategy, which makes the total of 432 contact teaching hours for 148 students in 7 academic groups. In addition, 55 hours of capacity building (summer camp, seminar, workshop) was delivered, which makes a total of 487 hours compared to the 439 planned.

Capacity-building tasks were successfully completed. These included the Orientation Seminar on European Studies (Task 2.1), the European Integration Seminar Series and Training on Teaching Methodology (Tasks 2.2–2.3), delivered jointly by EU experts Prof. Srdjan Redzepagic and Assoc. Prof. Marko Tomljanović. Together, these activities significantly strengthened the pedagogical and subject-specific knowledge of the teaching staff.

The EICCA Summer Camp on European Integration (Task 3.1) was held in August 2024, gathering 17 students from three universities and involving seven lecturers. The camp combined lectures, workshops, case studies, and data sessions with EUROSTAT, resulting in strong student engagement and high academic output.

In the current stage of the project only the Task 4.3. Closing Conference is pending and the rest of the projects activities have been completed successfully.

The creation of the EICCA webpage (Deliverable D1.3) ensured visibility and dissemination of project news, materials, and events (<http://im.iet.tj/>)

Following the Task 4.2. Internal Roundtables, the project also successfully organized a large-scale international conference on 12 June 2025, dedicated to the outcomes of the first EU–Central Asia Summit. Over 50 participants joined online and offline, including speakers from France, Croatia, Türkiye, Uzbekistan, the Kyrgyz Republic, and Tajik HEIs. This event significantly advanced academic dialogue and strengthened the project's regional impact.

The project carried out all planned academic, training, and dissemination activities with strong participation at each stage:

Course Development and Teaching:

- Four modules were fully developed with accompanying lecture slides, assignments, case studies, quizzes, and self-study materials.
- A comprehensive course book was prepared in English and translated into Russian for sustainability.
- A total of 384 contact teaching hours across two semesters and 192 hours of individual student work were successfully delivered to over 100 students.
- The course will continue to be delivered to an additional student group in spring 2026, ensuring further dissemination.
- The overall project plan foresees 439 total hours, which include:
384 teaching hours for students,
5 hours for the Orientation Seminar,
10 hours for the Seminar Series and Methodology Training,
(and within the 384 hours some hours taught by EU experts).

Capacity Building:

- Orientation and training seminars were held for 12 faculty members, improving pedagogical skills and EU-related knowledge.
- EU experts provided direct mentoring, review, and methodological guidance.

Co-funded by the
Erasmus+ Programme
of the European Union

Summer Camp:

- A week-long interactive camp provided intensive training through lectures, quizzes, workshops, Eurostat practice, and team projects.
- Students presented research on EU accession cases (Turkey and Croatia), demonstrating strong analytical development.

Public and Dissemination Activities:

- Internal roundtables and an international conference created opportunities for exchange with academic experts from Europe and Central Asia.
- The international conference served as a major dissemination platform linked to the first EU–Central Asia Summit.
- Regular updates through the EICCA webpage and social media increased visibility and outreach.

These combined activities created a strong foundation for sustainable integration of EU studies within IET TSUC and strengthened cooperation between Tajik and European institutions.

The results achieved so far demonstrate significant academic, institutional, and regional impact. Academically, the project created the first full European Integration course in Tajikistan led by a local HEI, delivering over 500 hours of structured teaching and student learning across two academic years. More than 100 students gained foundational and advanced knowledge on EU governance, policies, and integration, enhancing their academic and professional competencies.

Institutionally, the project strengthened the capacity of IET TSUC faculty through direct engagement with EU experts, improved pedagogical skills, and developed long-term teaching materials, including a multi-module coursebook and seminar resources. The translation of the course into Russian ensures durability, allowing non-English programmes to benefit from the course in the future.

The project significantly increased outreach through public events. The international conference and internal roundtables contributed to policy dialogue on EU–Central Asia relations and raised the visibility of Jean Monnet activities in Tajikistan. Participation from regional and European universities broadened cross-border academic cooperation and established new professional networks.

The expected long-term impacts include:

- increased institutional capacity for teaching EU studies,
- strengthened teacher competences in interactive and data-driven pedagogy,
- enhanced student understanding of EU governance and regional integration,
- expanded academic cooperation between Tajikistan and EU universities,
- greater visibility of EU values and policies in academic discourse in Central Asia,
- sustained continuation of the EICCA course beyond the project lifespan.

Task 1.1: Course analysis

DATE(S): 10-13 October 2023

PLACE: IET TSUC, Khujand, Tajikistan

Mode: Blended

Link: <https://jm.iet.tj/activities/>

https://jm.iet.tj/wp-content/uploads/2025/08/Annex-T1.1 Course Analysis EICCA.pdf

PARTICIPANTS:

1. Saidqosim Mukhtorov (IET TSUC)
2. Firuz Okhunov (IET TSUC)

OBJECTIVES: The objective of this analysis is to evaluate the relevance and effectiveness of the existing courses related to international cooperation and integration studies at IET TSUC. In particular, the objective is to ascertain the strengths and areas for improvement in these courses and to determine how the proposed European Integration Course could complement and enhance the existing curriculum.

The EICCA project introduces a specialised course on European integration with the objective of providing students with comprehensive knowledge of the EU's governance, policies and economic frameworks. This course will address gaps in the current curriculum, providing students with the skills necessary to understand, engage with, and benefit from international economic and political unions. The objective is to enhance the academic portfolio at IET TSUC and equip students with the skills to navigate future challenges and opportunities in an increasingly interconnected world.

This report presents the results of an in-depth analysis conducted on five core courses somehow related to EU Integration currently offered at the Institute of Economics and Trade of the Tajik State University of Commerce (IET TSUC). These courses were examined to assess their alignment with the objectives of the European Integration Course for Central Asia (EICCA) project and to identify potential gaps that could be addressed by introducing a dedicated course on European integration. The courses analyzed are as follows: Political Science, International Economic Relations, Customs Affairs and Customs Unions, World Economy, Integration processes.

Summary of Courses Analyzed

1. Political Science – 72 hours, second-year course.
2. International Economic Relations – 64 hours, third-year course.
3. Customs Affairs and Customs Unions – 96 hours, fifth semester.
4. World Economy – 144 hours, second-year course.
5. Integration Processes – 120 hours, fourth-year course.

Each course was evaluated based on four key criteria: content, methodology, teaching approach and relevance to international and regional integration processes. While the existing curricula provide a robust foundation in political science, international economics, and customs practices, the analysis revealed a notable gap in the coverage of the European Union's integration model. This report sets out the findings for each course and makes recommendations for improvements to the curriculum to align it more closely with the goals of the EICCA project.

The Political Science course, a mandatory requirement for second-year students, provides a comprehensive introduction to political systems, ideologies, and processes. The course covers both historical and contemporary political theories, with a focus on the Tajik context and the global political environment. The course is structured into 72 hours, comprising lectures, practical classes and independent work. It is assessed through two mid-term assignments and a final examination.

However, while the course provides students with essential political knowledge, it lacks specific content on European integration, which is a critical aspect of modern political cooperation. Incorporating EU governance and political structures into the curriculum would provide students with a more comprehensive understanding of regional political unions and their potential benefits for countries like Tajikistan.

This third-year course International Economic Relations provides students with an in-depth understanding of international trade, finance, and monetary systems, equipping them with the skills and knowledge to navigate the global economic landscape. The course comprises 64 hours of lectures and practical sessions and provides insights into key actors such as multinational corporations and international organisations.

While the course touches on the European Union in the context of regional integration, it does not provide a comprehensive examination of the EU's economic and political systems. Given the strategic importance of the EU as a global economic partner, the inclusion of a specialised European Integration course would provide students with a deeper understanding of EU policies and institutions, equipping them with the knowledge to navigate international economic relations more effectively.

The Customs Affairs and Customs Unions course, which is taught in the fifth semester, provides students with a comprehensive understanding of customs operations, policies, and practices, both in Tajikistan and on an international level. The course covers a wide range of topics, from customs payments and fees to the operations of customs unions, including the Eurasian and EU Customs Unions.

While the course offers practical training through case studies and problem-solving exercises, there is currently no focused exploration of the EU's customs policies and regulatory frameworks. The inclusion of modules on EU customs practices would equip students with the skills required to engage with European markets and align their knowledge with international customs standards.

This second-year course of World Economy offers a comprehensive introduction to the global economic landscape, exploring key topics such as trade theories, labour migration, and transnational corporations. The course comprises 144 hours in total and places great emphasis on the importance of independent learning and critical thinking. However, while it covers international economic integration, it does not provide a detailed analysis of the specific economic structures of the European Union.

Erasmus+ Programme
of the European Union

The introduction of a European Integration course would enhance this programme by providing students with detailed insights into the EU's fiscal policies, trade practices and economic cooperation mechanisms. The addition of this course would prepare students for more advanced discussions on global economic trends and international trade relations.

The Integration Processes course, designed for students specialising in international economics, offers a comprehensive study of global integration movements. The course covers theories of economic integration, indicators of economic cooperation, and specific regional integrations, including those in Europe, Eurasia, and Central Asia. However, while the course provides an overview of European economic integration, it does not explore the complex socio-economic and political structures of the EU in sufficient detail.

A dedicated course on European integration would facilitate students' comprehension of the EU's distinctive governance model and impart a more profound understanding of one of the most sophisticated integration systems globally. This would be in line with the EICCA project's objective of promoting awareness of effective political and economic unions.

He introduced all the participants of the orientation seminar and briefly presented the agenda of the meeting. According to the agenda, there was a presentation about the introduction to the European Integration Module jointly by Prof. Redzepagic and Prof. Tomljanovic. Prof. Redzepagic introduced the EU Integration courses offered at the University of Cote de Azur and its principles. Then Professor Tomljanovic spoke about the importance and general objectives of the EU Integration Module. The main topic of the second day of the orientation seminar was the Eurostat database. Professor Marko Tomljanovic organized an online workshop in which he introduced the Eurostat database and illustrated the possibilities of using the platform in the EU Integration Module. Unlike a simple lecture, Professor Tomljanovic asked the participants to make an online practice of Eurostat usage for educational purposes together. The last part of the orientation seminar was dedicated to the question and answer session, where participants actively asked questions about the Eurostat database. After that, the EICCA coordinator Saidqosim Mukhtorov expressed his gratitude to the EU experts Prof. Srdjan Redzepagic and Marko Tomljanovic for the fruitful orientation seminar and pointed out that Task 2.1 is successfully completed.

OBJECTIVES: The objective of the EICCA European Integration Seminar Series and the Training on Methodology of Teaching is to provide a comprehensive educational experience that improves the understanding and teaching skills of World Economy faculty members at the Institute of Economics and Trade of TSUC. The seminars aim to provide educators with an in-depth knowledge of various aspects of European integration, including its history, economic and political framework, and strategies for sustainable development. In doing so, the project aims to prepare the faculty to effectively deliver a new course on European Integration, thereby enriching the curriculum and fostering an environment of academic excellence within the institution. This initiative, supported by the Jean Monnet Actions, underlines the commitment to promoting higher education and research in European Union studies.

Day 1 (Monday, May 20, 2024). Fundamentals of common currency euro.

The seminar series began with a session devoted to the euro - the mainstay of European economic integration. Professor Srdjan Redzepagic from the University of Cote d'Azur from France, who is a leading expert in the field, presented a comprehensive analysis of the structure of the Eurozone and the fiscal mechanisms that support it. He discussed the stability criteria to which member states must comply, the role of the European Central Bank in maintaining price stability, and the challenges of fiscal harmonisation within diverse economies. The session concluded with a lively discussion on the possible future enlargement of the Eurozone and its implications for the European project.

Day 2 (Tuesday, May 21, 2024). History of the European Integration process.

On the second day, Professor Marko Tomljanovic presented a vivid historical narrative of European integration. He followed its origins from the ashes of the Second World War, through the establishment of the European Coal and Steel Community, to the European Union of today. The lecture highlighted key milestones such as the Treaties of Rome and Maastricht and examined the socio-political catalysts that have shaped the Union. The Professor emphasised the importance of the Charter of Fundamental Rights in safeguarding the values and freedoms that define Europe today.

Day 3 (Wednesday, May 22, 2024). European development strategies, environmental protection policy and sustainable development.

The third day of the seminar was a forward-looking session exploring Europe's strategies for sustainable development. Professor Srdjan Redzepagic took the podium again to share his insights on EU environmental policies, including the Green Deal and the Circular Economy Action Plan. He emphasised the importance of integrating sustainability into education and research and the EU's commitment to public health, especially in light of recent global challenges. The discussion inspired educators to consider how these policies could be integrated into their curricula.

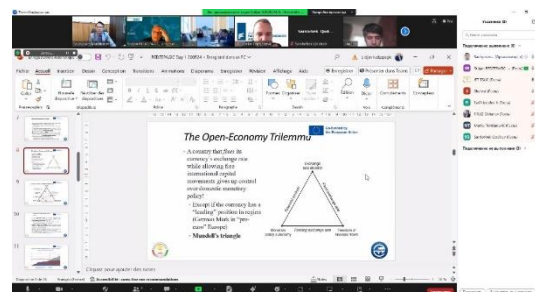

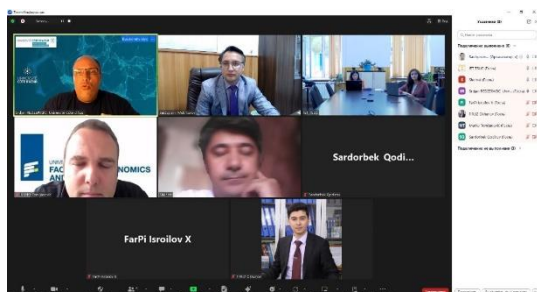

Day 4 (Thursday, May 23, 2024). EU institutional framework and specifics of decision-making in the field of EU common policies.

On the fourth day, Associate Professor Marko Tomljanovic from the University of Rijeka provided an extensive overview of the EU's institutional framework. He explained the roles and functions of key institutions such as the European Commission, the European Parliament and the European Council. The session offered a deep dive into the legislative process, the balance of power between the institutions and the intricacies of the policy-making procedures that govern common policies. The professor also touched on the principle of subsidiarity and its application in EU governance.

Day 5 (Friday, May 24, 2024). The European Internal Market and fundamental market freedoms.

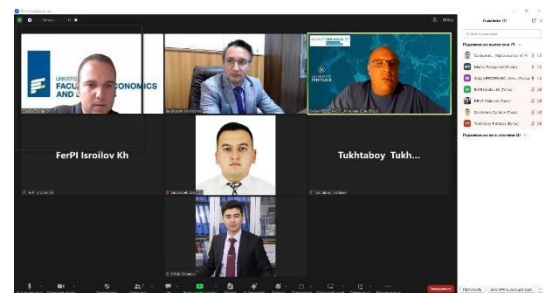

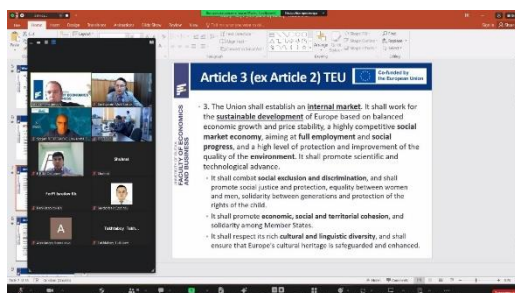

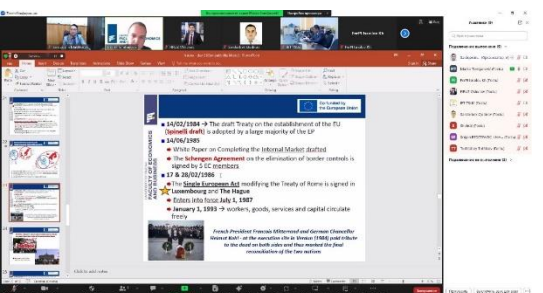

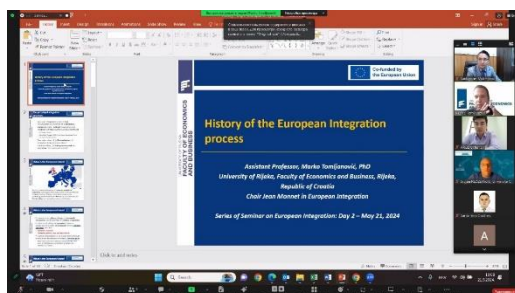

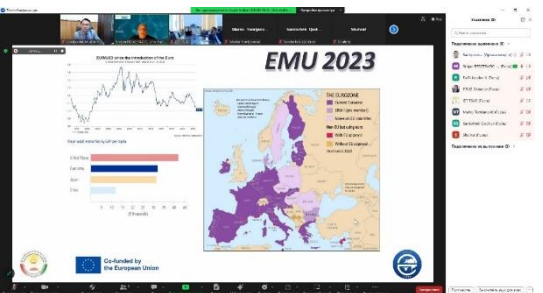

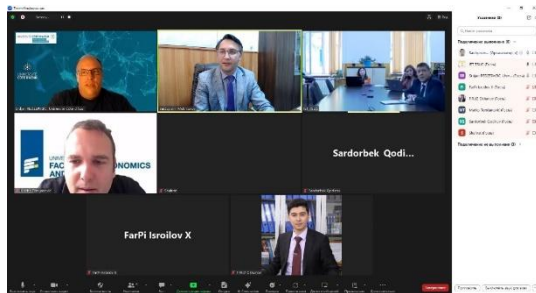

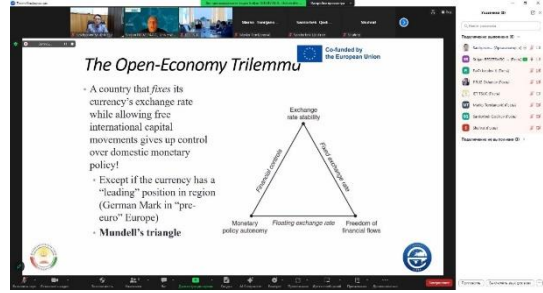

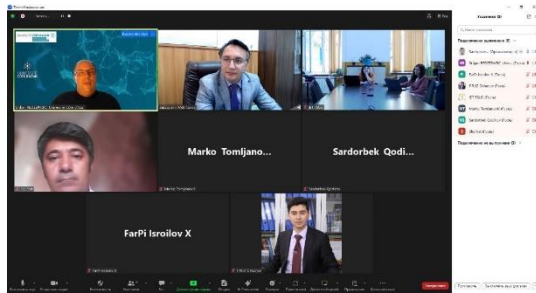

The final day of the seminar series focused on the European Single Market and the four fundamental freedoms: the free movement of goods, services, capital and persons. The discussion covered the evolution of the Free Trade Area and the Customs Union into the Single Market and the role of the Schengen area in facilitating mobility. The session highlighted the economic and social benefits of market integration and the challenges of maintaining a balance between national sovereignty and collective European interests.

The seminar series has been a huge achievement, equipping the IET TSUC faculty with the knowledge and pedagogical tools to deliver a solid European Integration course. The Director of IET TSUC, Jalilzoda Abdurashit Abdukamol, and the Head of the International Centre and Global Engagement, Saidqosim Mukhtorov, expressed their deep appreciation to Professors Srdjan Redzepagic and Marko Tomljanovic for their dedication and expertise. Their contributions have been important in realising the vision of the EICCA project.

OBJECTIVES: The EICCA Summer Camp on European Integration was designed to equip students with a comprehensive understanding of the European Union (EU) and its integration process, along with practical insights into its functioning. The primary objective was to enhance participants' understanding of the EU's political, economic, and social systems, while fostering critical thinking about regional cooperation and integration in a globalised world.

Co-funded by the
of the European Union

The camp aimed to provide students with both theoretical knowledge and practical skills through lectures, interactive discussions and hands-on workshops. The programme covered a range of essential topics, including the history of EU integration, governance structures, fiscal and trade policies, market integration, sustainable development, and EU accession requirements. Furthermore, the camp placed an emphasis on practical engagement, offering activities such as quizzes, case studies, and data analysis exercises.

A further objective was to foster collaboration and teamwork through research and presentations on real-world cases of EU accession, enabling students to analyse both the challenges and benefits of joining the union. By the end of the programme, participants were expected to have gained a deeper understanding of the EU's structure and policies, as well as developed critical perspectives on how such frameworks could be relevant for Central Asia. The camp aimed to inspire students to engage in international relations and policy discussions, preparing them to become active contributors to regional integration processes in their own countries.

Day 1 (Monday, 23 August, 2024)

The EICCA Summer Camp commenced with an opening ceremony in the scenic city of Guliston, marking the start of an exciting week focused on European integration. There were 17 students selected from the Institute of Economy and Trade of Tajik State University of Commerce (IET TSUC) and Tajik State University of Law, Business and Politics (TSULBP) and Polytechnic Institute of Technological University of Tajikistan (Polytechnic). Mr. Saidqosim Mukhtorov, EICCA coordinator, inaugurated the camp with a speech outlining the goals and mission of the EICCA project. Mr. Mukhtorov highlighted the importance of studying European integration, noting it as one of the world's most successful regional cooperation initiatives.

Subsequently, Daler Mirpochoev, Vice-Director of Science and International Relations at TSUC, presented the inaugural lecture. His presentation provided an overview of the historical development of the European Union, from its origins as a post-World War II peace initiative to its current status as a powerful political and economic union. Following the lecture, participants engaged in a roundtable discussion led by Mirpochoev, exploring the potential benefits and challenges faced by countries during integration. This interactive session facilitated a productive exchange of ideas, setting the stage for the days to come.

Day 2 (Tuesday, 24 August, 2024)

The second day of the camp focused on the institutional structure of the European Union. Shuhrat Qobilov, an EICCA expert, gave a comprehensive lecture on the governance system of the EU. He explained the roles, functions, and distinctions between the European Commission, the European Parliament, the European Council, and the Council of Europe. The lecture provided participants with essential insights into how these bodies interact to manage EU policies.

To solidify the knowledge gained, students participated in a quiz designed around the key concepts covered during the lecture. The quiz not only reinforced their understanding but also fostered teamwork and active engagement. In the afternoon, Saidqosim Mukhtorov delivered a presentation on the life and contributions of Jean Monnet, often regarded as the "Father of European Integration." Mukhtorov outlined Monnet's career, his visionary ideas, and the key steps he took to initiate the European project, inspiring participants to reflect on leadership in regional cooperation.

Day 7 (Sunday, 29 August, 2024)

The seventh day comprised a practical workshop on the Eurostat platform, led by Firuz Okhunov. The participants were introduced to Eurostat's functionalities and gained hands-on experience in navigating the platform to analyse data on various socio-economic indicators across EU countries. During the workshop, students compared datasets from different nations and developed forecasts based on the identified trends. This session equipped participants with practical data analysis skills, enhancing their understanding of EU statistics and trends.

Day 8 (Monday, 30 August, 2024)

The final day of the camp was devoted to student presentations and a review of the key learnings from the programme. Two student teams presented their research findings on the EU accession process. The first team provided an in-depth analysis of Turkey's long-standing candidacy, focusing on the economic, political, and social challenges that have hindered its EU membership. Furthermore, they emphasised the investments Turkey received during its candidacy period.

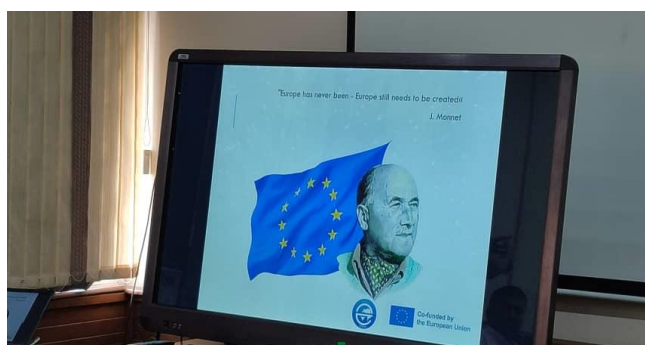

The second team presented their findings on Croatia's accession, outlining the reforms implemented to join the EU, the Schengen Area, and the Eurozone. They provided a data-driven insight into the benefits that Croatia has experienced since becoming an EU member. Following the presentations, a panel of experts comprising Daler Mirpochoev, Saidqosim Mukhtorov and Firuz Okhunov provided feedback, commending the teams for their analytical work. The camp concluded with a certificate ceremony, during which participants were duly recognised for their dedication and active engagement throughout the event.

The EICCA Summer Camp was a great success, providing participants with a comprehensive understanding of the EU's governance, policies and integration strategies. The programme combined lectures, discussions, quizzes and workshops to provide students with theoretical knowledge and practical skills in policy analysis and data management. The final presentations showcased the participants' ability to apply their newly acquired knowledge, marking the camp as a valuable educational experience that will foster deeper engagement with European integration in Central Asia.

On May 18, 2026, the Jean Monnet Module "European Integration Course for Central Asia" (EICCA), coordinated by the Institute of Economy and Trade of the Tajik State University of Commerce (IET TSUC), successfully held its grand final Closing Conference. The high-profile hybrid event took place in the Building 2 Grand Hall of IET TSUC and served as the comprehensive culmination of the landmark project spanning from 2023 to 2026. Bringing together institutional leadership, national representatives, international academic experts, local faculty, and an audience of over 100 students and specialists, the conference celebrated a historical milestone: the successful completion of the first-ever Jean Monnet project coordinated directly by a higher education institution in Tajikistan.

The conference commenced with official welcome remarks from Dr. Zokirkhonzoda M.Z., Vice-rector of IET TSUC, who emphasized how the EICCA project has permanently elevated the international status and pedagogical innovation of the university. This was followed by a strategic address from Dr. Nakhatzoda Mohbonu, Coordinator of the National Erasmus+ Office in Tajikistan, who highlighted the profound structural importance of having Tajik higher education institutions directly coordinate Jean Monnet initiatives to accelerate integration into the global academic landscape. The academic core opened with a distinguished keynote speech delivered by Prof. Dr. Sc. Dubravka Aksamovic from the Josip Juraj Strossmayer University of Osijek, focusing on the expansive, strategic value of building knowledge networks and cross-regional cooperation through European Union studies beyond Europe's borders.

A central element of the conference was an exhaustive, data-driven project closure presentation delivered by the EICCA Project Coordinator, Saidqosim Mukhtorov. Mr. Mukhtorov meticulously outlined the operational journey and structural deliverables achieved across the three-year lifecycle of the alliance, which successfully united the localized execution of IET TSUC with top-tier international expertise from France and Croatia. Crucially, he noted that the academic course was successfully materialized via a newly developed 4 ECTS curriculum supported by the official EICCA Coursebook. He broke down the four main pillars of this open-access resource: Foundations of European Integration (F. Okhunov & S. Qobilov); The EU Internal Market and Economic Integration (D. Mirpochoev); Sectoral Policies of the European Union (T. Tukhtaev); and EU Enlargement, Data-Driven Governance, and Global Influence (S. Mukhtorov). Mr. Mukhtorov emphasized that the course uniquely bridged theory with reality by fully integrating live Eurostat data navigation exercises, interactive case studies, and localized regional problem-solving tasks. He concluded by detailing the project's wider dissemination footprint, including initial faculty orientation seminars, methodological teaching workshops, Silk Road International Innovation Summer Camps, and the project's centralized digital infrastructure.

The conference then transitioned to specialized academic reporting from international and local experts:

- Prof. Srdjan Redzepagic (University of Côte d'Azur, France) delivered an empirical presentation on the role of quantitative facts and trade figures within economic integration, urging that regional partnerships and trade policy formulation must be anchored in rigorous macroeconomic data metrics.
- Assoc. Prof. Marko Tomljanovic (University of Rijeka, Croatia) presented new pedagogical insights for teaching international modules, underscoring a strategic shift toward active student participation, interactive problem-based learning, and policy simulations to help students internalize complex global institutional frameworks.
- Assoc. Prof. Dalerjon Mirpochoev (IET TSUC, Tajikistan) provided a localized case study proving why EU economic studies are vital for World Economy specialists in Tajikistan, detailing how a solid understanding of European single market rules and regulatory compliance gives Tajik graduates a competitive edge in international commerce.

Shifting the focus to student outcomes, EICCA Project Manager Firuz Okhunov presented an in-depth analysis of student perceptions regarding European studies. His findings demonstrated how the modular course actively reshaped student viewpoints, fostering critical thinking and sparking original student ideas on cross-border resource sharing, market connection, and cooperative problem-solving frameworks within Central Asia.

The event successfully concluded with an interactive, lively Q&A session moderated by Saidqosim Mukhtorov, which brought together faculty, speakers, and students to discuss future sustainability plans and continuous academic exchange. The session was finalized with the formal presentation of institutional certificates to the core project implementation team, expert panels, and speakers. This concluding task stands as a definitive, monumental milestone for the EICCA project and higher education in Tajikistan, establishing an outstanding baseline for internationalized, data-driven academic cooperation in Central Asia.
